

Arlington Welcomes VHC Health's New Outpatient Pavilion

By Delia Reynolds

VHC Health in Arlington, Virginia, has opened a new seven-story Outpatient Pavilion. The pavilion will provide direct access to treatment facilities for patients upon arrival. Virginia Gov. Glenn Youngkin attended the ribbon-cutting ceremony and praised the facility. The Pavilion was designed to address the growing need for affordable and accessible healthcare. The facility includes outpatient surgery, imaging, pharmacy, lab, endoscopy, physical therapy, and 26,000 square feet dedicated to women's health services. Arlington County Board Chair Christian Dorsey believes the pavilion will benefit the community by consolidating services in one location and reducing travel time for patients. The hospital's next project is renovating the main campus hospital to expand inpatient services.

VHC Health in Arlington, Virginia, has recently unveiled its new Outpatient Pavilion, a state-of-the-art seven-story building that aims to enhance patient care and accessibility. This expansion project will also create additional in-patient beds in the hospital's existing outpatient area, addressing the growing need for affordable and accessible healthcare in the community.

The Outpatient Pavilion at VHC Health provides patients with direct access to treatment facilities as soon as they arrive on the health system's main campus. This seamless integration ensures that patients can receive immediate care and attention, promoting efficient and effective healthcare delivery.

The ribbon-cutting ceremony for the new pavilion was attended by Virginia Governor Glenn Youngkin, who praised the facility for its exceptional design and advanced technology. However, he emphasized that the true strength of the pavilion lies in its dedicated healthcare professionals who are committed to providing world-class care to their patients.

Chris Lane, the president and CEO of VHC Health, expressed his pride in the completion of this long-awaited expansion project. He emphasized that the Outpatient Pavilion is designed to meet the growing healthcare needs of the community while remaining affordable and accessible to all.

In addition to outpatient surgery, imaging, pharmacy, and laboratory services, the new facility also includes a dedicated space of 26,000 square feet for women's health services. Developed by a female-led physician team, these services encompass a wide range of preventive and palliative care options, including obstetrics and gynecology, maternal fetal medicine, genetics, breast health, urology, cardiology, advanced radiologic imaging, and vascular diagnostics.

Arlington County Board Chair Christian Dorsey highlighted the positive impact of the Outpatient Pavilion on the community. By consolidating essential services under one roof, patients can avoid the inconvenience and stress of traveling between multiple locations. This integration promotes a more seamless and patient-centered healthcare experience, ultimately improving patient outcomes and satisfaction.

Looking ahead, VHC Health plans to renovate the main campus hospital to further expand its inpatient services. This ongoing commitment to enhancing healthcare infrastructure demonstrates VHC Health's dedication to meeting the evolving needs of the community.

The opening of the Outpatient Pavilion at VHC Health represents a significant milestone in improving healthcare accessibility and quality in Arlington, Virginia. With its advanced facilities and dedicated healthcare professionals, the pavilion is poised to provide world-class care to patients in a convenient and efficient manner. This expansion project reflects VHC Health's unwavering commitment to delivering exceptional healthcare services and ensuring the well-being of the community.
